(c) whether it is also a fact that efforts made for the development of small scale industries in the past years have proved futile; and

(d) if so, the reasons for decrease in the number of products of small scale industries in the reserved list continuously during the recent years?

THE MINISTER OF SMALL SCALE INDUSTRIES (SHRI MAHAVIR PRASAD): (a) and (b) No, Sir. On the contrary, the exports of products manufactured by the small scale industries (SSI) continue to account for nearly 33 per cent of the total exports from India.

(c) No, Sir. The number of SSI units has grown from nearly 105.21 lakh in 2001-02 to about 118.59 lakh in 2004-05. This sector has also registered rate of growth in terms of value of production which has generally been than that of the rest of the inudstrial sector.

(d) There is no specific empirical evidence to suggest that the deletion of products from the reserved list during the recent years has, by itself, adversely affected the overall performance of the SSI which has been positive throughout these years. The de-reservation of products reserved for exclusive manufacture by the SSI is carried out with a view of enhancing, among other things, their competitiveness. Further, the total number of such reserved products at present constitutes just about 8.43 per cent of the total number of products actually manufactured by the SSI.
